SUMMARY EXPLAINING SIGNIFICANCE OF SCHOLARLY/CREATIVE WORK CONDUCTED:

My theoretical and empirical work on student learning has helped to identify and clarify relationships among cognitive, metacognitive, motivational, and affective processes that underlie effective learning in postsecondary educational settings. Through consulting projects and workshops, my colleagues and I have provided guidance, feedback, and professional development to policy-makers, administrators, instructors, counselors, advisors, and other learning support staff, primarily within Texas, on how to help students become more strategic and self-regulated learners. I am also engaged in ongoing grant-funded research projects focused on evaluating the effectiveness of learning support interventions and this work will help to inform educators about effective practices in the areas of developmental education and adult basic education.
